The South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration (DDR) Commission organized a one-day workshop in Aweil, Northern Bahr el Ghazal State on Wednesday, to sensitize key stake holders on contents of the new DDR program.

The workshop aimed at informing the key stake holders on the program implementation as well as their roles and responsibilities.

The workshop was attended by state officials, local authorities, representatives from the UN Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS) and United Nations Development Program (UNDP).

The Northern Bahr al-Ghazal state Education Advisor, Wany Anyit Majok, urged the participants to work towards making the DDR program a success.

"I appeal to all relevant ministries and departments to play their respective approach in the implementation of the programs. I urge all heads of departments to fully cooperate at every level to make DDR a national success," Wany said.

DDR is a national project aimed at demobilizing former war combatants and integrating them into civilian lives.
